The Effect of School Environment on The Health Behaviors of Jordanian Adolescents in Amman City
Little information exists about Jordanian adolescent health-related behaviors and the factors that affect them. Healthy or risky behaviors developed during adolescence have long-lasting effects into adulthood. This study was conducted to examine the effect of the psychosocial aspect of the school environment, including peers and teachers, on adolescent health behaviors; and to assess the occurrence of selected health behaviors among adolescent school students in Amman. A cross-sectional descriptive correlational design was used to draw a sample of in-school adolescents aged between 11 to 15 years. The final sample included adolescents from five public and two private schools in Amman. Study participants filled out a translated version of the 1997/98 HSBC questionnaire. The study revealed that a negative perception of the school environment and a lower perception of peer support was associated with unhealthy tooth-brushing behavior. Lower perception of teacher support at school was associated with unhealthy physical activity and tooth-brushing behaviors. Seat belt use had the highest frequency among the unhealthy behaviors (85.8%), while tooth brushing behavior had the lowest frequency (46.9%).
